

Name two things that make you feel like you are on cloud nine.

How much money should someone save for a rainy day?

Has anyone ever stolen your thunder?

What's the best way to break the ice with someone you have just met?

Have you ever cancelled your plans because it was raining cats and dogs?

Do you ask for help when you are snowed under with work or tend to try and deal with everything on your own?

Have you ever called in sick or missed school because you were feeling under the weather?

Do you know anyone who's always making a storm in a teacup?

After a bad cold, what are the best ways to feel as right as rain again?

How did you feel when you realized a "close friend" was really a fair-weather friend?

Do you think every cloud has a silver lining? Describe an unpleasant situation you've experienced which in the end turned out to have some advantages.

How do you tend to relax in the calm before the storm?

Do you know anyone who spreads gossip as soon as they get wind of something?

Do you get along better with people who have their head in the clouds or their feet on the ground? Why?
